
Marketing & Webinar Automation

An all-in-one platform to simplify how CompQsoft Digital runs its webinar and email campaigns.

Prepared by InvisiEdge Marketing LLC for CompQsoft Digital • For review • 10 July 2026

Purpose of this document

This is a plain-language overview of how CompQsoft Digital's webinar marketing works today, the challenges with that approach, and the single, simpler platform we propose to build to bring everything together. It is meant as a starting point for your feedback — no technical background needed.

How it works today

Running a webinar campaign currently involves several separate tools and a good deal of manual work:

- Prospect lists are prepared and loaded into the email platform (Constant Contact).
- Contacts are grouped into segments — by industry (for example insurance, oil & gas, healthcare, federal), by Microsoft account executive, and by role (IT, line of business, customer service).
- Email invitations are sent in weekly rounds (usually four to five) through the email platform in the lead-up to each webinar.
- The webinar itself runs on Microsoft Teams, which also handles registration and sends reminder emails.
- After the webinar, the attendee list is downloaded from Teams and reconciled by hand in a spreadsheet.
- An account report is built manually — showing, for each company, how many people from each role engaged, who opened and clicked, and who attended — and passed to the sales team for follow-up.
- The website plays a limited role in this process today.

In short, the process works — but it depends on several disconnected tools and a lot of manual effort concentrated with a few people.

The challenges with today's approach

- Spread across many tools. The team constantly switches between the email platform, Teams, the website, and spreadsheets, and copies information between them by hand.
- Manual tracking and reporting. Attendance and engagement reports are put together by hand, which takes time and can lead to mistakes.
- A missed website opportunity. Because registration and event pages live on third-party tools, the website sees little benefit. It currently receives limited traffic, so hosting these pages on your own site is a clear chance to grow visits and improve search visibility.

- Hard to scale. The know-how and access sit with a small number of people, which makes the process difficult to grow or hand over.

What we propose to build

A single, easy-to-use dashboard that brings the whole process into one place. From that one screen, the team will be able to:

- Manage contacts and segments.
- Create and schedule the webinar email invitations.
- Set up the Microsoft Teams webinar in a single click.
- Publish the registration page on CompQsoft Digital's own website.
- Automatically receive attendance and engagement reports after each event.
- Generate the sales account report with one click.

Importantly, Constant Contact and Microsoft Teams keep doing the heavy lifting behind the scenes. Email deliverability and the webinar experience do not change — the team simply works in one simple place instead of many, and the manual steps disappear.

Before and after

	Today	With the new platform
Tools the team uses	Several separate tools	One single dashboard
Setting up a webinar	Done manually across Teams and other tools	Created in one click
Registration pages	Hosted on third-party tools	Hosted on your own website
Email invitations	Sent and tracked separately	Created and scheduled in the same place
Attendance tracking	Downloaded and reconciled by hand	Collected automatically after each event
Engagement reports	Built manually	Generated automatically
Sales hand-off report	Compiled by hand for each account	One click, ready to use
Website traffic	Little benefit from campaigns	Campaigns bring visitors to your site
Visibility into results	Scattered across tools	Live view in one dashboard

What this will achieve

- Less manual work, fewer errors. No more copying between tools or building reports by hand.
- Faster, better sales follow-up. Sales receives clean, ready-to-use engagement and attendance reports right after each webinar.
- More website traffic and visibility. Event and registration pages live on your own site, helping attract visitors and improve search ranking.
- Easier to run and scale. One place, clear steps, and less dependence on any single person.
- Full, real-time visibility. A live view of how every campaign and webinar is performing.

- Your data stays with you. Registrant and engagement information is captured and kept on your own platform.

What the team will experience

To run a webinar, the team fills in a short form and clicks once. The webinar, the registration page on your website, and the email invitations are all set up together — no jumping between tools. As invitations go out, the dashboard shows who is opening and clicking. After the event, the attendance list and engagement summary are ready automatically, and the account report for sales is a single click away.

How we will roll it out

We will deliver this in clear stages so you see value early and can give feedback along the way.

Stage 1 — Bring campaigns and reporting together. Manage contacts and segments, create and schedule email invitations, and view engagement and account reports in one place. We will share an early working preview for your feedback.

Stage 2 — One-click webinars and automatic attendance. Set up Teams webinars in a click, host registration on your website, and receive attendance reports automatically.

Stage 3 — Added automation and team tools. Import prospect lists, more automation, and views for the wider team.

Later, optional. Connect additional outreach and follow-up workflows as needed.

What we will need from your side

We will handle all of the technical setup and heavy lifting. From your side, we will simply need:

- Access to your current tools (the email platform, the Teams webinar account, and the website) so we can connect them.
- A quick confirmation of the Microsoft licensing needed for automatic webinar creation — we will guide you through this.
- A short working session to review the website and registration setup.

Next steps

- Review this overview and share any feedback or questions.
- We will walk you through an early working preview.
- Together we will confirm priorities and timing.

Our goal is simple: make CompQsoft Digital's webinar marketing easier to run, more effective, and fully visible — all from one place.
